A Different Perspective on Winning and Losing

Three years ago, Jarrod Barakett hung up his ice skates for good. Humiliated by a coach obsessed with winning, Jarrod decided he'd had enough.

He was eight years old.

No matter what sport they play, everybody likes to win. The pursuit of personal excellence is a commendable goal, but it cannot be measured solely by winning a trophy or finishing first. Too much emphasis on winning leads to many of today's problems in sports.

When winning is the only thing that matters, some people feel the end justifies whatever means are used to get there. That leads to cheating, breaking the rules, use of performance-enhancing drugs, violence and intense pressure on athletes.

The value of sport goes beyond whether a team or individual wins or loses; scores or doesn't; defeats or is defeated. Coaches, administrators and parents must appreciate, teach and reinforce the value of the personal accomplishments and self-worth provided by educational athletics.

That feeling of achievement comes in part from winning, but also from having tried hard, taken part, learned new skills and overcoming obstacles. Many athletes become frustrated by the constant pressure to win and drop out because they feel inadequate or inferior.

Many of the greatest athletes and teams win less than half the time. Tim Raines of baseball's Montreal Expos won the National League batting title in 1986 with a .334 average. He was only hitting the ball effectively 33 percent of the time!

When competition is kept in perspective, everyone can achieve excellence. It is a matter of attitude and intention rather than where you are in the standings.

1995 PIAA OFFICIALS' CONVENTION

HARRISBURG HILTON
HARRISBURG, PA 17101

AUGUST 4 & 5, 1995

The inaugural PIAA Officials' Convention will be held August 4th and 5th, 1995 at the Harrisburg Hilton located on 1 North 2nd Street, Harrisburg, PA. (717) 233-6000. The Hilton is conveniently located in Harrisburg across the river from beautiful City Island, a family multi-recreational area. Additionally, annual rules interpretation meetings will be held in the sports of football, soccer, field hockey, wrestling, volleyball, basketball, and swimming and diving. Attendance at these meetings will count toward a member's annual attendance at each sports mandatory rules interpretation meeting.

For the prospective official, PIAA will give sport examinations for all sports in which PIAA registers officials. This session will be held at 8:00 PM on Friday, August 4, 1995. All applicants must be pre-registered with the PIAA Office to take a sports examination and do not need to register for the convention to take an examination.
